To Whom It May Concern,

Though I have never had to undertake a CIS, i gave talked to many operators who have been subjected to them.

My opinion of the process is that the community really has no prior right of objection to any type of business taking up in a location where zoning allows it. In nature the CIS presupposes that licensed venues are problematic and I don't believe they should be objected to before they begin. It is not fair in principle that such businesses are not given the a starting chance. Obviously there is a broad swathe of sanctions that can be applied by liquor licensing and by local government, not to mention residents sitting down with owners to voice concerns (which is how we resolve any complaints).

The whole system is frankly absurdly tilted against operators in acquiring new licenses and maintaining them.
