Hello

I'd just like to have a short say in this review

I've seen the impact that these lockout laws have had on the night time economy of Sydney, it has drained the city of life!

As a resident of Sydney I would like to have freedom in my choices, I occasionally work nights at a cafe and once my shift is over there is no where for myself and my colleagues to go for a quite drink.

I'd also like to have the choice to start my nights out when I saw it suitable, now we have to choose between a nice dinner or rushing into the city to try and get a night in with these restricted hours

The state government has taken away our right to choice and has gone about combatting alcohol related violence all wrong. Of course stats will go down if you close down Sydney night life, we need a better approach. Look towards London, Berlin and other major night time cities for inspiration

Kind Regards
