The lockout laws were a knee jerk reaction to two highly publicised deaths. Neither death would have been avoided if lock out laws were in place. Barry O'Farrell was a politician and did what he thought would make him popular in marginal seats.

I love Sydney and I love it when friends from overseas visit and were in awe of its beauty a vibrancy, but when they cannot enjoy an 18 year old Glenlivet (circa. $40 a nip) on the rocks after dinner, it makes us look stupid, and now they are going to Melbourne.

The exemption of the casino's is the farce, when The Star is the most violent venue in Sydney.
