Hi there

I do not feel the current lock out laws are at all appropriate for Sydney, we are a major city and need to run this city as a vibrant and competitive environment. It is clear this government does not have the capacity to do this. What the city needs are less restrictions on alcohol free zones and more support for local business. This government has destroyed the livelihoods of many small business operators and pushed more money into the corrupt coffers of the casino. The casino, what a place to go to enjoy yourself, where you can gamble your life away whilst you drink as much as you like, its more than a joke and if anything the casino should be the first place to be shut DOWN.

There needs to be a better focus on public transport and more money spent on police resources (instead of billions on a white paper military boost, more corruption). Sydney seems to be so lost and taken over by a few mindless nanny fools

Who seem to want to control and shut down everything. Its not working. The biggest issue being drugs hasn't been addressed and simply shutting everything down is a mindless solution. If you want to take things seriously you need to ask the real questions, the first death at kings cross happened at 9pm and the person responsible was not only drunk but on DRUGS, hold him accountable through the weak justice system. The second punch at Bondi beach happened at 10pm

Involving alcohol, and not to mention the attitude of the victim. These events didn't even happen after midnight. There is a lot wrong with these lockout laws and basic measures need to be taken to reverse this blanket rule by assessing each area and allowing places to reopen. Things need to change

Thanks for your time

Vicky
