The liquor law changes have been draconian. I live in  and I resent the killing of the cross and Oxford St by such broad brush measures. Tourists will be underwhelmed and the nighttime economy has been trashed. In an international city there should be places other than the casino to go after 1:30am and drink responsibly.

Injuries may have fallen in number but if so the trade off for a dreary city without a night time economy is not worth it. It is like banning the recreational use of cars. The injury issue can be addressed in more direct ways, such as better policing of RSA issues.
