To whom it may concern

I do not think the ban on selling alcohol after a certain time, and the lock out laws, should remain in place.

The number of venues which have shut down because of lack of revenue is a sad reflection on the dulling down of life, caused by a nanny state.

Further, the majority of people are capable of conducting themselves appropriately, and should not be punished for the foolishness of a minority.

If people are not required to be responsible for their actions, they will never learn to be responsible for their actions.

My husband and I often finish work after 9pm, and by the time we get to somewhere to buy a drink or food, neither is available. That is because takeaway alcohol cannot be bought, and many places have stopped serving food late because of these laws. The sensible majority are being punished.

Require your citizens to step up and be responsible for themselves, like they are in so many other major cities around the world where there is still a night life.

Regards

Sharna
