Hi there.

I'd like to express my disappointment with the lock out law changes as a citizen of Sydney.

I'm extremely disappointed how these changes have impacted many businesses in the lock out areas, especially restaurants like Jimmy Liks.

The government has no right to impose their own moral viewpoint on greater society - as a hard working tax payer, it should be up to the individual when we choose to go out at night and not be subjected to these ridiculous, childish laws.

I have spent many years living in London and New York - as a comparison point citizens are treated as adults in these cities and nightlife is actively promoted and thrives all night.

I am disgusted that long standing Sydney institutions such as QBar, Soho, and many others are now gone for good thanks to these knee jerk, ill conceived policies. Shame on the Baird government.

Finally the fact that the casinos are exempt make these laws completely laughable.

Best regards

Julian Croft
