Hi,

I do believe the lockout laws are having an adverse affect on the cultural relevancy of Sydney. To be a truly global city that appeals to all demographics we as a society need to be encouraging arts and music events of which are currently struggling with the restrictions applied from the lockout laws.

There needs to be a root cause analysis on the problems affecting Sydney and the people who inhabit our wonderful city at all times of the day. Any problems identified should then be addressed at the root cause to best treat or solve - for e.g. Educational programs and marketing discouraging needless violence, as well as the aftermath that a punch leaves on a family - and in this case a community such as ours.

Regards,

Tim
