To whom it may concern,

I cannot add anything to the already powerful argument put forward by Matt Barrie and Keep Sydney Open.

The vision we make for this city cannot be determined by the actions of a minority. By determining the freedom of a city based on the behaviour of a few, we do nothing to model positive behaviour change or create a culture that supports diversity and opportunity - vital for the economic success of the city.

Do not let politics of fear say that we live in a city where I must be saved from myself.

What petulant, ineffective and immature policy.

Regards,

John Dawson
