Drinking to excess is a cultural norm for a lost of adolescent and twenty something males and unfortunately the same applies to females. The King Hit phenomenon is here because society has allowed it to happen. First hand with thirty eight years of policing, I have seen the thousands of stories that don;t make the papers or six o'clock news, they just stay in my head and the grief belongs to the families that are ruined by the actions of societies condoned belligerent drunks.

It is now a little safer in the city and we now need to look at how it can be conducted in the rest of New South Wales. Until such time as we can change societies values through education and their behavior from a violent, binge drinking, anti-social behavior to a respectful, fun loving society where we can walk the streets at night without the fear of being attacked.
