To whom it may concern,

I love Sydney and relocated year a couple of years ago. I tend to travel a lot for work and personal reasons.

That being said, the lockout laws in Sydney has left me not wanting to invite friends or family over from other parts of the world as it is simply not a fun night out anymore. It feel like you are being watched at every moment and you can hardly get into any bar / club at certain times. Not to mention the plastic cup after 10 pm or something? We are adults here and if some cannot handle a drink in glass ... kick them out and not others. The solution is not more rules - educate the public on adequate behavior through social media and role models will do.

Go to HK over a weekend..... you can walk with a glassed beer bottle from one bar to the next, see police is rare, no incidents, friendly, all hours.... during HK 7's the encourage people to drink. I cant see Sydney 7's being much fun with watered down beers and lockout laws in the city.

My 2 cents....

Cheers,
Eugene
