It is amazing that, just when "domestic violence" has been justifiably elevated to the level of concern that now applies within our community, anyone would want to insist on access to more grog.

I have been a happy consumer of various alcoholic drinks over the last 60 years. That has never resulted in violence, but as a Police Officer with almost 34 years service, I know that grog (and nowadays, dope) is the fundamental cause of 97.5% of violence, both domestic and otherwise.

Why anyone would wish to FURTHER impose grog onto our society is beyond me, other than for motives of money. As alcohol is a poison, those who want to do this join the ranks of the heroin supply chain and so become "professional poisoners" prepared to kill young Australians in pursuit of profits.

The review should not only contemplate maintaining the current restrictions but should consider extending them, perhaps to enforce closing times of 1am for ALL liquor outlets.

Best wishes
