Dear Review Board,

I would like to see the lock outs removed. The unintended consequences seem to have been too harsh on multiple industries to be justified.

Personally I just want to live in a city which has a vibrant arts scene where venues of all sizes, from large clubs that play electronic music to a tiny bar that might have singer songwriter. I want solutions that don't put artists out of work, that doesn't shut the city down. I want a city that is exciting to live in, that people from all over want to move to because it is vibrant and diverse both during the day and at night.

If the laws were about alcohol fueled violence there would not be exemptions around trading at the casino. A more balanced approach is needed. An approach that allows for people to work in hospitality and the entertainment fields; an approach that recognises not everyone who goes out and has a drink wants to punch someone.

Regards,

Naomi Fraser
