I am a retired Police Officer.

As a young man I was able to safely walk around almost any part of Sydney with a very low fear of assault. As a working police officer I had no fear of assault while carrying out my duty. If there was any disturbance in hotels, in most instances, the local car crews of General Duty Police were able to restore order in short time.

The time arrived in recent years whereby I personally refused to go to the city of an evening to theatres or anywhere else because of the threat of violence by drunken or drug effected thugs who roam in mods attacking innocent victims of any age.

Recently since the restricted hours of alcohol service (who on earth needs to get 'plastered' ar 3am) the incidents of alcohol effected incidents has reduced as reported by those emergency service personnel involved as well as the media.

RETAIN THESE RESTRICTIONS IN THE INTERESTS OF SAFER PUBLIC AREA'S. In fact these regulations should be spread state wide!

Regards,

Bruce Gane
