Hello, I'm just writing to say I disagree with the lock out laws. I have had the privilege to have spent my 20s and early 30s living in Sydney and have safely enjoyed many nights out during this time. It saddens me that the next generation won't be able to enjoy a fun night with their mates because these lock out laws have taken the life, the heart and soul out of Sydney. People are being made to feel that by going out and enjoying themselves with friends they are committing a crime. I am concerned that without places to go people will become less and less social, which is detrimental to society. I moved to Sydney from New Zealand when I was 21, and have made my life here. I am now considering moving because of what this town is becoming. You are punishing people for having fun and disguising it as being for our safety but we can see through your lies. Thanks for reading. Alicia
