I am a resident of Rushcutters Bay, and have many friends who live in Kings Cross and Potts Point. When late night drinking was permitted, the safety of visitors to the Cross was greatly reduced, and many local residents were unwilling to walk alone in the street at night on Friday or Saturday. Noise levels from drunks, particularly young women, and from breaking bottles, cruising vehicles and motorcycles all degraded the amenity of the area, whether you were outside or inside.

Please keep the current lockout laws in place. The only beneficiaries if they are relaxed will be the alcohol industry. Many small businesses have started up while the area has been comfortable to work and live in. If you want to encourage high density living in Sydney, you must maintain a safe and amenable environment in all of Sydney.
