To whom it may concern,

When I first moved to Sydney on 2004 it felt alive. There was a energy to this city. But in the last 2 years I have watched it slowly die.

The lock out is affecting me and my way of life. I am a decent, normal and responsible adult who feels that I should be treated accordingly.

I am a mother who lives in the Hills area where I raise my family and work 5 days a week. I deserve to be able to chill out on the weekends and let my hair down without being treated like a criminal.

It's time to target the offenders not the general public.

Sydney was once an international city that I was proud of, now it's an embarrassment.

If Melbourne can figure out how to have a rich, thriving night life with 24 hour transport so can Sydney. Give us back our city!

Regards

A mum who hates the lock out
