I recently had my family here from the USA.

They had been here five years prior and noticed how Sydney at night was now less vibrant, they commented on plastic glasses (like being at college) and wanted to go back to Hugos...alas I had to tell them it closed as result of the lock out laws and how so many other bars and restaurants have closed as a result.

They tried to compare Sydney to New York where there is always a police presence in the busy parts of the city and suggested instead of locking down – put more police on duty after 10pm.

They left this time round with a less than spectacular view of what they said USED to be a vibrant city.

They actually laughed when they were served drinks in plastic glasses.
