I disapprove with the current laws.

Previously it was always frustratingly obvious that quite poor city transportation in Sydney at night was contributing to violence and unrest.

Promotion of public social safety at night can be and should be managed through: effective transport options, awareness campaigns, collective business security, focusing on the problem, trading limitations on a case by case basis rather than a blanket ban.

Sydney has suffered and will continue to under the lockout laws. Fading culture. Tourism departing to Melbourne(even Sydney siders). Destruction of Industry, Music and Hospitality.

Corruption is obvious with the Casinos being exempt. It's an embarrassment for the government. Gambling is the source of much misery. The lost revenue of a diverse lot of businesses is being handed(partially) to the casinos, the rest is going interstate or vanishing.
