Let's not make sydney go from one of the most musically influential cities in the world till the dullest. Many other international big cities manage not to set bed times for its residents while maintaing a safe city, this is a plan thought out using the bluntest tool in the toolbox, be more creative. If you won't to set a good record for this government the nanny- state laws don't help. Violence was already decreasing before laws we in place. There are no fights in the middle of the desert, as there's little to nil foot traffic. Similar to kings cross, it is a ghost town caused by dumb ill founded laws made by old men that know little to nothing about the culture of music.

We will soon see how 'independent' and unbiased Ian Callinan is.
