Hi there,

As a life time Sydney resident, I would like to add my voice to the review. I am 33 and my days of dancing till dawn are well and truly over - but it is the vibrancy and choice taken away from us that spells the end of what should be considered a world class city.

My experience living in this city over the past 2 years has changed. It is a city that feels stifled. It is a city that feels reprimanded like a grounded teenager. It is a city that feels like it's dying.

As professionals, both my wife and I sometimes work late. The first time I walked out the door to grab a bottle of wine at 10:15pm and couldn't, it all almost sounded like a joke. This is Sydney, not Kabul.

No one is advocating for a system that endangers ANYONE - but failing to provide a system that offers choice and lifestyle is just not good enough. Sydney siders expect more of their leadership.

Please try harder. There must be a solution that makes our nightlife safer, and also allows us as a creative city to continue to shine.

Kind Regards,
al morrow
