

Sydney should be a 24 hour city

Olivia Patterson [REDACTED]

Wed 30/03/2016 3:09 PM

To: Liquor Law Review <liquorlawreview@justice.nsw.gov.au>;

I'm sure there will be a thousand essays so ill keep this to short(ish) dot points.

- Sydney should be striving to be a global 24 hour city. Lock-out laws stunt the tourism, latenight, hospitality industries and more, hurting the economy as a whole, let alone the individual businesses that have already been forced to shut down. Let's stop this before more are.
- the fact that the star and barangaroo are excluded is not only ridiculous but also insulting to the public, as if people are so dim witted as to not see through this blaring omission. The NSW gov need to get out of Mr Packer and Co's pockets
- Let adults be adults. This feels like prohibition.
- Violence has not decreased, which supposedly is the soul purpose of these laws.
- Blanket laws that apply to everyone (guilty or no) are draconian and unfair (how about address the individuals that are violent or the SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS that lead them to be so)
- This is a knee-jerk reaction to a few very sad stories. but what is sadder is the blatant misuse of these stories for political motive and to guilt the community into submission.