I am a GP in the Newcastle area. I was very impressed with the decrease in violence when the new Newcastle Alcohol Laws.

I then sent messages to the then premier in support of similar laws being implemented in Sydney. These laws seem to have decreased violence to a significant extent.

I have a close friend who lives in Darlinghurst. He finds life much better as a resident.

I understand that there has been "collateral damage" with the closure of some clubs in Kings Cross.

From what I read in the papers(of which I cannot be sure of the accuracy of course) some of these seem associated with criminal activity so its a good thing they have closed.

I would urge the NSW government to stay firm and not compromise.
