I used to love Sydney.

Whether or not you hated the cross there was something democratising about everyone coming from their corner of the city to share the same space.

Personally, it wasn't for me but the over regulation and abuse of power that the current state government has displayed has made me ashamed.

Now I have moved to Melbourne, another beautiful city which is all the better for the fact that the grip of government control has been loosened.

Furthermore, this decision claims to be well informed so I won't doubt the wisdom of it but to leave just a casino as the only exclusion zone from these laws, when there is a proven link between problem drinking and problem gambling is pretty worrying and dark.

To our premier, you are no leader of mine.

To all in Sydney, move to Melbourne because unfortunately now, it's just better.
