This is ridiculous! There is no need for the lockout laws. There are better ways to go about keeping the streets safer. For one you can change the laws to stop advertising and glorifying alcohol in advets, media, bars. Weve done it for smoking, why not for alcohol? The culprits of these one punch incidents werent even in any venues at the time. They purchased their grog at a bottleshop out in the burbs and got drunk well before hitting the town! Maybe buying cartons and bulk alcohol should be reserved to people over the age of 35yo to minimise the amount of drunk youths outside of licensed venues! Increase security and police and street entertainment in entertainment/cbd presincts to minimise the risks associated with alcohol fueled violence. Its just stupid that you can buy heroin and legally shoot up in a shooting gallery in kings cross but cant even buy a bottle of chardonnay after 10pm. Wake up and see the problems youre causing with this damaging approach. Sure we could reduce car accidents if we got all cars off the streets, but wheres the sense in that? We are not a nanny state or country. Dont make us prisoners in our own country!
