In a way not being a business owner has allowed me to look at the lockout law issues with a less biased approach. My livelihood and income doesn't depend on it like so many desperate people. But even so, I am disgusted with how badly this city is dealing with laws that are directed at a small number of violent people, but is affecting so many more innocent people.

I think it's a backwards decision to simply hand out city wide curfews and alcohol bans to save the potential brawls (that are happening anyway) that might break out in venues...

We need to have an approach like New York City, or if that's not close enough to home... MELBOURNE... Openly discuss these issues that directly relate to the public, and that affect us so greatly, rather than playing these idiotic games.
