I am a former Police Officer and am currently working in hospitality. I have since 2006 been in a management role in a large RSL club and have been the licensee whilst in charge on a shift. I have had the responsibility of monitoring sobriety in the club and executing the club's responsibilities under the Responsible Service of Alcohol laws. Through my experience I believe I am in a position to contribute to this debate. The alcohol related violence laws and associated measures must stay in place. Staff of licenced premises and the public need to be protected from alcohol fueled violence and I believe these measures are working. It is a matter of maintaining decency in our community and protection as previously stated and it seems to me that the NSW Government is duty bound to act to keep these laws in place.
