To whom this may concern,

I understand that something has to be done about alcohol fuelled violence. I personally believe the lock out laws that are going to be brought into Sydney will do nothing more then to provoke more alcohol violence. Please consider this situation. If you have a nightclub full of intoxicated people, and then suddenly end their night early on pushing all of them out of the venue and onto the streets. These people won't just be able to catch a taxi home as there will be many waiting for one. Several drunks on the streets of Sydney with nothing to do will not be good for the city and if anything it will provoke more attacks and violence.

I believe the lock out laws should not be put in place.

Thank You
