

liquor law review

AS Andrew Stigter

 Reply all |

To: Liquor Law Review;

Mon 8:01 PM

Inbox

To whom it may concern,

All restrictive liquor licensing laws should be removed and then the review should start from scratch and implement licensing rules that actual tackle issues directly. Not based on some emotional knee jerk reaction or over policing.

We want to live in a society where individuals are responsible for their actions. Put in place laws that tackle antisocial behavior but leave the individual freedoms intact. The laws should not be based on group or social restrictions. Societies want to exist and can function without all these restrictive laws. Less government interference in people lives.

Where people who commit crimes whether they are intoxicated or not, should be dealt with in accordance with the laws that tackle those behavioral issues.

Also most anti-social issues are happening because of a few people. Fine those people and ban them from venues, areas, etc.

Have liquor licenses for all times of night including 24 hour licenses but in entertainment zones spread and mix the type of licenses in that zone to provide multiple options for people and also spread the closing times.

Also have public transport readily available that gets people home safely and easily. Not just a few night buses, but include trains running all night on all major lines.

Regards,

Andrew Stigter