Hello,

I really hope you review these lock out laws as I recently tried to explain our laws to European friends visiting Sydney, and to say it's an global embarrassment is an under-statement! I arrived in Sydney 9 years ago from London and fell in love with how great the culture in Australia is. If i was moving here now, I most likely wouldn't stay. In fact one of my friends said they like the country but would no longer consider Sydney as a place to live as it's too backwards and restrictive.

I hope you start to realise these laws will start to affect more than the hospitality industry. There is a reason all the good people leave small towns - and that is already happening in Sydney.
