To whom it may concern,

I believe that the lockout laws are an inappropriate measure to curb the issue of alcohol fuelled anti social behaviour.

Poor late night transport leaving too many people on the street that want to go home should have been addressed Before these laws came in. From personal experiences, getting a taxi in kings cross between 2-3am before the lockout laws was extremely difficult.

Also the prohibition of take away sale of alcohol after 10pm is quite ridiculous.

I believe poor late night transport and aggression used by bouncers in general kicking intoxicated people onto the street which in turn causes them to be aggravated Is the main reason for the one punch attacks. The lock out laws do nothing to address these issues
