I recently returned from a europe trip and the topic of what a joke sydney has become on an international stage was a topic i don't wish to discuss again anytime soon. I could only confirm what was actually happening to the disbelief of those who asked the questions. Sydney has become a joke. Word has spread. Thousands upon thousands of visitors who planned on spending a week here will now only spend a couple of days midweek then take off somewhere else where they can enjoy a night out without ridiculous restrictions.
